Memo from: Editor of LHS59.org

Here is the rest of the story.... As some of you might not know, I have been working on my Memoirs over the past 8 months: "Anecdotes of a Lifetime: Memoirs of a Professional Geologist," It covers my childhood and high school years in Lancaster, and my subsequent years as a professional geologist. The Memoirs are now available and I have announced that on my Facebook webpage:

Also, here is the formal announcement (below), which clicks to a short audio on the Preface, the Table of Contents, and links to Barnes and Noble and Amazon. My primary objective of writing this book was to make a record, both in paper and in digital formats, for my grandchildren and their grandchildren of their grandfather, his family, his friends and of the issues of their day from the mid-late 20th Century to well into the 21st Century and his travels around the world as a professional geologist.

If you would like to discuss the contents of the book, feel free to give me a call after you read it. I look forward to that.
